

JEANETTE BRONÉE

RETHINKING (SELF) CARE AT WORK

Jeanette Bronée is an inspirational performance and culture keynote speaker on the topic of why we need to bring self-care with us to work in order to master our attention, perform better and be more engaging leaders.

She shows how we can obtain both personal and organizational health, optimize our personal and professional ROI and achieve sustainable success by creating a company Culture of Care® where everyone is nourished. Jeanette teaches us how to increase our work/life quality by integrating tech and humanity at work, without losing our health to stress and burnout, and access our core human resources for peak-performance by asking better questions.

She speaks about the challenges we face to change our habits and gives us the tools to learn how to thrive in a busy world. Her approach inspires change in an easy to understand, non-dogmatic way. Her goal is to empower her audience to take charge of their health and work-life habits, enhance their physical, emotional and mental resilience, master their attention and their time, decrease stress and increase their performance by changing the way they work.

AUDIENCE/OUTCOME

Keynotes and programs help leaders and teams learn the skills to prevent burnout so they can reach a higher level of personal and professional performance, innovation, growth.

Companies get the framework for creating a culture that's more inclusive, engaging, and care-driven to cultivate better connection, communication and collaboration. The focus is to leave with tools to harness the human advantage by rethinking the process of achieving results, create impact, and sustainable success, without sacrificing health and personal lives. Employees have found they are more productive because they know how to manage their energy, focus, and attention and also gain more work-satisfaction because they have agency over their own employee experience.

It is my focus to provide experiences that are packed with accessible and inspirational take-home tools that spark the desire to feed our hunger for success and fuel our performance, without stress and burnout. The goal is to nourish your work-culture so that everyone will work healthy and finish the day happy, with energy to spare. Let's create a culture where everyone is thriving. Of course you want that. The question is not if, the question is when?
